	Jim McClellan interviews Bishop George McKinney, pastor of St. Stephen's Church of God in Christ, San Diego, and author of Let The Church Be The Church and The Local Church Can Change The World . McKinney is particularly distressed over the homeless, not only in San Diego, but in the large cities of America as well. He believes the church has the responsibility of meeting the needs of the homeless, who are not only hungry, but alienated from society. He contends that government welfare cannot cope with the demand, but the church can.

	Marsha Deal of "Wise Grocery Shopping" told our hosts Bill and Esther Illnisky how she has learned to be more frugal in grocery buying by comparing newspaper ads, good planning of menus, and coupon clipping. She demonstrated many items comparing price per ounce. She shops for the elderly and handicapped in her city for minimum charge and uses this as an outreach in her Christian witness.			2/1/87 4:00A.M.	1:59:48

	Jim McClellan interviewed George W. Kessinger, President of Goodwill Industries in Orange County. Kessinger, associated with Goodwill Industries for 16 years, gives a brief picture of the relationship Goodwill has with the community, especially the poor and disabled. Their upgraded program teaching marketable skills to the disadvantaged follows through by acting as the liason in finding jobs for them in the marketplace.			2/4/87 3:30 P.M.	56:48

George and Bonnie Callahan interviewed Donna Russell, author of "Beauty For Ashes". Donna told how because of being a victim of sexual abuse from age 4 she became mentally unstable and was addmitted to Florida State Hospital for seven years at age 18. Her healing process began when she understood that God loved her and continued as she read God's word for herself and forgave all those who had abused her.
